

WHICH STEPS TOWARDS EUROPEAN POLICIES AGAINST ANTI-GYPSYISM?

15 November 2016

10.00-17.00

Thon Hotel EU – Rue de la Loi 75, Brussels
Room: The Netherlands III

Rationale

Anti-Gypsyism remains the most widespread and least challenged form of intolerance in Europe, violating European principles and creating obstacles to Romani individuals in their daily lives. The prejudice against Roma is reflected in public discourse and in the failure to address incidents of hate and intolerance. Particularly troubling is the persistence of biased opinions among officials in public institutions, which can lead them to treat Roma less favourably than other citizens.

Roma today benefit less than other citizens from public policies or investments in local infrastructure such as schools or social housing. They become victim of political campaigns and measures that explicitly aim at harming the minority. The experience of discrimination, deepened by the exclusion from political life, can create mistrust in public institutions, creating barriers for the successful dialogue between the state and its citizens.

Fortunately, more and more European governments recognize that discrimination against Roma threatens social cohesion and that it hampers the social advancement, education and employment of their citizens. Understanding also that lifting Roma from poverty alone will not overcome hostile attitudes shared by a majority of Europeans, governments have adopted proactive measures promoting a culture of diversity, respect, and mutual dialogue—both in state institutions and in society at large.

Still, the lack of established structures and experience creates obstacles and at times policy-makers struggle to convince voters and the media of the benefits of fighting prejudice and fostering equality. Against this background, the seminar shall present success stories of education and reconciliation and explore how they can be systematized and widened throughout Europe.

Objective

The seminar aims to encourage policy-makers to significantly step up their efforts in combatting anti-Gypsyism in the short and mid-term.

It will explore promising practices throughout the EU and promote the benefits of governmental coordination, trainings of civil servants and multipliers, funds for cultural and dialogue programmes, media initiatives, and monitoring mechanisms.

Organisers

The seminar is hosted by the Open Society Foundations and Michael Roth, Minister of State for Europe at the German Federal Foreign Office. It takes place under the auspices of the European Commission High Level Group on combating racism, xenophobia and other forms of intolerance.
